John McGarvey founded McGarvey Custom Homes in 2001. Over the past 22 years, his name has become synonymous with excellence in home building. “When you walk into a McGarvey house, you know,” John says.

From full custom home creations, renovations, and additions – to one-of-a-kind ceiling treatments and a six-step paint process for every room, McGarvey focuses on the details that matter. Their in-house company, SouthLinks Custom Cabinetry, is the driving force behind many of their one-of-a-kind custom details.

“When you step into one of our homes, you feel the quality of the finish level,” says Jennifer McGarvey Burch, John’s daughter, and the director of residential construction. She’s one of eight family members involved in the business.

Though wow is a word John often hears, he insists that his homes are as approachable as they are stunning. “Our houses are elegant but not formal. They’re livable. You feel comfortable in them. You know you can take your shoes off and curl up on the couch and feel good.”

Feeling good at home is essential. John knows that his clients take pride in their property. And a beautiful custom home is an important signifier of success. When the McGarvey team delivers a magnificent house built to a client’s specifications, it’s a great feeling for everyone. “The client feels proud, and everybody wins.”

Jennifer agrees. “Our homes are works of art for us. In this community, there are a lot of successful people. We’re honored to build our custom homes for them.”
